Mormon Dignitaries who Have Just Made the Tour of Europe What they Say of Brigham and His Disciples.

A party of Mormons reached this city by the Wisconsin on their return to their borne after an extended European tour. Among them are Apostle Lorenzo Snow and his cister, Miss Eliza Snow, who have taken rooms at the Astor House. Miss Snow is seventy years of age, very modest in manner, and refined in esciversation. She is the poet of her people, and since she emigrated with the sect from Ohio, when a girl, she has devoted her life to song writing for the new Zion. Apostle Snow, one of the twelve apostles who make up the council of Brigham Young, is a very pleasant old gentleman, who talks little, states the artikeeps all personal matters strictly secret. other member of the Church is Elder Smith.

who has rooms at the St. Nicholas. Mr. Smith is a portly gentleman, with dark beir and snowy beard, and wears spectacles with very large glasses. He is talkative and cheerful. is a cousin of Joseph Smith, and a native of this State. He went through all the Mormon templies, and relates his experience with a satisfaction of a veteran of many wars. "I got tired," said he, last evening, "of being shutup in the mountains, and I thought I'd take a tour around the world to see what was to be seen, and I went all over Burope, and away down into Palestine." In a conversation of several hours he explained the spirit and work of the Mormon people. President Young had not resigned the office of chief of the people, but only of the presidency of a few corporations which he gave his name and indicence to. "The old man," said he, "has been trying to work himself to death. We get him down to St. George every winter, about 25 miles below Salt Lake, where the tool is less severe, and we try to lighten his cares; but he is all it ewhile working, nevertheless. He had sizieen wives now and fifty-nine children, where a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, weare a large lot of our Indian of the certs, we were a large lot of our Indian of the certs, we were a large lot of our converts of the certs of the converts in Germany. We are growing of the certs o this State. He went through all the Mormon troubles, and relates his experience with a satisfaction of a veteran of many wars. " I got tired,"

Mr. Smith received a request yesterday from a Mormon tamily on Long Island to preach at a funeral of a child, but as he and the party start for the Westto-day he could not go. Yesterday Apostle Snow and sister visited a number of Mormons the reside in Brooklyn, and last evening received visitors at the Astor House. A DEAD WIFE'S GHOST.

his Solemn Promise Never to Marry

Again—The Bridal Cake Destroyed.

From the Lowerille Commercial, Jame 14.

A German of good standing up town lost his wife by deafh about a year ago. On her death bed the wife exacted a solemn bromise from the husband that he would never marry again. He was sincere at the time, and fully believed that he was willing to remain a mourning widower the rest of his days. A few months ago, however, he began to feel a warm affection for a lady up town. In due time he proposed, and was accepted. The promise to the dead was disregarded in his affection for the living, and the man was made sensible of his broken promise. His sleep was disturbed and haunted with unpleasant dreams. Nightmare, or the accessing presence of his spirit wife, brooded over bim, until the approach of night was to him the sure coming of terror. His appetite failed him, he wasted away inflesh, and his spirits sunk below a zero standard. Still he persisted in his intentions to wed, with all these premonitions of evil staring him in the face.

The marriage day was settled, and the miserable man made the necessary preparations. He ordered from the confectionery a wedding cake, of size and quality commensurate with the occasion. The baker was cognizant of the man's circumstances, and warned him against his contemplated step, but all to no avail. Wed he would. The baker made the cake, it contained the usual quantity of indirection, and was as elegant an article as could be desired. When it was done he put it carefully away in another commy with a number of other nightmare-provoking cakes, covering it with a glass protector. The door was locked, and the baker retired.

This was Tuesday night, and the marriage was to take place on the day following. The man who would marry met his betrothed and his friends in the evening and was married. The cake was sent for. The baker, with professional pride, opened the locked door and entered for the cake, when lo? I the cake lay strewn about the floor, the glass case was shivered to pieces—and yet not a thing had ent

From the Boston Heraid, Jane 16.

The story of the robbery of money and bonds from the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Esty, on Jay street, on Saturday, ends in the fact that no theft was committed. Mrs. Esty is a lady considerably advanced in life, and having money and securities in her house representing between $5,000 and $6,000, which she had for some time kept between the mattresses of her bed for safety. A few days since, with the idea of putting it in a more secure place, she removed the deposit and hall it under a piece of furniture in her chamber, and forgot all about where she had placed it. On Saturday morning she looked in the usual hiding place in her bed, and it was not there. She immediately became excited, and gave information to the police. She could not tell the number of the bonds or give much satisfaction beyond the statement that they had disappeared. The Boston police were notified, and preparations were in progress to discover, if possible, the thief. On Saturday afternoon she was visited by several officers with the object of gathering more information, when the old lady suddenly remembered she had changed the hiding place, and the property was found intact.
